Insane staff prosecuted

By Nancy Facts

On Saturday, March 29, several members of the Insane staff were arrested for embezzling Ithaca College funds. David Swine, Idiot in Chief, allegedly planned the whole scheme after watching T.J. Hooker on the CBS late night movie the previous Wednesday.

Swine, who is on good terms with Richard Correntle, Vice President of Student Affairs, and Carl Sgroch, Treasurer, gained knowledge of a safe located on campus. Of course, the actual location of the safe cannot be exposed, but hints will be given by asking any Insane member.

After discovering the location of the safe, Swine consulted with members of his executive staff. Each were given a set of specific instructions. Incidentally, I was not involved due to the fact that I was on vacation with famous entrepreneur Barry Grosen (Do you have any input Mack Mulcaney?). Floyd "Mob" Saratini, Marginal Error, was placed in charge of gathering arms and explosives in case of unexpected visitors. Adam Raisin, Philler Editor most famous for his spread in Playgirl, took pictures of the floor plan surrounding the safe. Robin Fern, Whine Editor, "persuaded" Dr. Correntle, Carl Sgroch and President whaleon to attend a meeting with Melissa Vendug, Public Nuisance Director, to keep them occupied.

Layne Rebounder, Machine Manager, disconnected the alarm. Being proficient in the use of computers, Rebounder found the system "a piece of cake."

Allison Dutch, Fairs and Creatures Editor, and Mike Smurfy, Sports Editor, rigged the safe with the explosives. Mike Beagal, Money Manager, counted the money after the explosion. But when the last stack of money was removed, another alarm was set off. Saratini, stricken with panic, started shooting the walls. Mike Smurfy was hit in the fire. Swine, remembering a move he saw on Hooker, jumped out a window and fell on a moving car. Swine clung to the roof until the car was parked in Syracuse. Other staff members exited through the door. Barb Rich, Loan Shark Editor, escaped through a back door. She was the last one seen with the money. Police have reason to believe that she exited the U.S.A. and is now in hiding in Argentina. The Insane staff congratulates her for her triumphant escape and hopes she will send them a postcard during her twenty year shopping spree. Smurfy was left wounded.

When I.C. Security responded to the call, Smurfy was spotted under a desk and the Insane staff became the prime suspects. Smurfy confessed after an hour of subjection to bright lights, no water or a cigarette.

The staff was found and arrested in the Insane office the following evening. They are all presently in jail. Smurfy was placed directly in Tompkins County Community Hospital suffering from eye problems and bullet wounds. He is in critical condition. Allison Dutch has since escaped from jail and is potentially dangerous.

Members of the staff were fished and illegal substances were found. When asked about the drugs, Swine responded, "I was holding it for a friend. I've never done any drugs in my life." The money has yet to be located. (Good job, Barb Rich!) When questioned about the money, Fern stated, "I'll tell you if you bring me a Tab, a nail file and a bottle of nail polish." Bail has been set at five grand a piece.

Because of the loss of funds, construction of the union has ceased. Consequently, the union will not be closing this week. The Pub closing party is a farce to gain extra money for the College. You will still be blessed with the convenience of check cashing and eating in the function.

New parking rules change

By Biff 4. Sure

Beginning this Friday at 8:00am a new parking system will be in effect. The "Import-Domestic" system will replace the current color coded stickers. All students, faculty, staff, and administrators, are required to adopt the following changes.

Those failing to conform will have their car towed, and auctioned during senior week. Proceeds will be contributed to the "Fund for a Parking Garage."

The new system, I-D for short, is based on the "Odd-Even" method used during the gas shortage.

If you have an import car you will be allowed to park in all spaces currently designated for faculty, staff, and administrators. If you are not sure if you own an import, there are two ways to verify this: (1) call daddy and just ask or (2) check your registration and if you cannot pronounce the make of the car, it is probably an import.

If you own a domestic car, parking will only be permitted at NCR, S-lot, Terraces, and M-lot. Domestic cars built prior to 1982 will be banned from campus all together.

Other upcoming changes in the traffic policies include: Helicopter parking reports from WVIKS 106 FM. A drive-through window for "In the Bag." And the white zone is for loading and unloading of passengers only.

New slope and lodge

By Ima Dorable

In December of 1986, Ithaca College will open a new ski slope and lodge.

Funds for the project were donated by Mrs. Smeilds, who states that, "Brooky didn't like Princeton, so she decided to transfer to I.C.. Skiing is her favorite sport, so I just had to buy her a slope."

Brooky will be living with President I.J. Whaleon. Authorities at the school say that she made the request after having a candle light dinner with Whaleon at the exclusive Tower Club. Brooky said, "I think he's so adorable."

The ski slope and lodge will cost approximately $1,697,832.142. The New Quad will be remodeled for the lodge facility. Features will include a thirty-person indoor Jacuzzi, fully-equipped health club, outdoor skating rink, massage

Dave Antlers: "Hell no, I won't go!"

By Ol' Blue Eyes

Ithaca College senior, Dave Antlers, announced today that he will not graduate until the school divests its stocks from corporations with investments in South Africa.

He believes that his decision to remain on campus will show his dedication toward eliminating Apartheid. Antlers hopes that other seniors will consider similar action in solidarity against Apartheid.

"Since I will be completing all my requirements in May, I'll really have time to pressure the trustees," he said.

Antlers' long-range plans include applying for an editorial position at the New York Times, Washington Post, and U.S.A. Today.

Dimies, The Movie

By Iva Crabs

Friday, March 28th, Tommy Feel, owner of the Slugout, announced that he just signed a million dollar contract with Steven Stealberg for the production of Dimies, the Movie.

Feel stated that Dimies will be free on Thursday, April 10, 17, and 24. Feel got a grant from New York State on those dates from 8-11pm so everyone can come down. Stealberg stated, "The more the merrier. We want to pack 'em into the Slugout. It'll make it more interesting."

parlor, and a fine restaurant and bar with a view of the slopes.

I.C. students will have free membership to the facilities. The cost to faculty and administration will be $1,500 for the season.

Bobby Mallard, director of the Health Center, states that they are planning ahead for the possibility of skiing accidents. The center is installing a self-serve x-ray machine so anyone can check themselves out. A self-serve pseudophedrine dispenser will also be available.

WHINES AND WHIMPERS

Oh my God like ya know what!?

To the Editor:

Oh my God-ya know what? I got a call from my dad and he said that he put $5000 in my checking account-now I can buy a seat at the bar in the Slugout. And oh-ya know what? Like I hate this Union mess-all I do is track mud all over my room cuz like the soles of my Reeboks have like these little weird circles on them and the mud gets stuck in there and I can't even get it out with a paper clip in my boring accounting class. And now I even have to pay the maid an extra bonus to vacuum my room like twice a day. And when I get out of bed in the morning these hard little pebbles get stuck in between my toes. And I still can't get the mud out of my Reeboks. And ya know what else? Like, I can't stand those bag lunches in the library. Why can't they understand that I don't like the taste of Saran wrap in my tuna hoagie. It makes the mayonaisse tum bad and like all the sandwiches look really old and smushed. And like that's just not cool. And oh yea-they only give milk and juice--NO TAB. And, oh God-what am I gonna do when they close the junction? Like, I absolutely HAVE to have my coffee in the morning. And where am I gonna buy my cigarettes now? Oh God what a pain. And speaking of pains, I'll have to walk all the way around the union to get to the lower quads-like its just not fair. And like ya know what else really pissed me off? Like I was burning up with a fever and I had to go to the Health Center and they made me take my own temperature. And if that wasn't bad enough-they gave me a plastic thermometer. Like ewwww. It was almost as nasty as the Saran wrap on my tuna hoagie-like this school has some serious investments in a plastics company. My dad says it's all who ya know-but like he makes soooo much money and I still get a plastic thermometer. And like it's about time a laundry service came to the campus--now that all my white clothes are gray. So how was I supposed to know to separate darks from lights? Like we have a maid, and I'm sorry there are kids here from blue collar families, but like it's not my fault, and I think their fathers aren't as rich as mine anyway. But ya know what? I really think that they should reimburse me for my ruined clothes-they might as well be fair about it-ya know? And, oh God, like I was in the library the other night and some woman who looked like a man was walking around and came right up to my face and told me to put out my roach. What nerve. Like I told her that she was like so totally sexually frustrated and she needs a REAL woman. Like she got soooo pissed off and threw me out. But I called my dad and his really really expensive lawyer got her indicted for uncalled for harassment-like my dad always comes through with the green.

FROM THE EDITOR'S TOILET

After four years of college, one learns the good from the bad and what to do and what not to do. In most cases, the latter often occurs.

For those graduating, I hope you have done most, if not all of the following. If you haven't done anything listed below, to make your last few days here complete, hurry. For those continuing on, good luck (you'll need it) and try to take our advice (you'll need that, too).

- *Register late, Add/Drop a lot, if the going gets tough, withdraw.
- *Do not buy a textbook, unless absolutely necessary.
- *Hand in all papers at the last minute. Or, better yet, ignore deadlines altogether.
- *Sit far back in the classroom. Stay out of direct sight of your professor.
- *Never visit your professors in their offices to discuss classwork.
- *Do not attend the first week of classes. Leave school a day or two before holiday breaks. Begin and return at least two days late.
- *Any study time that is unavoidable should be "crammed" at the end.
- *Never proofread a paper. Correct as few of your own errors as possible.
- *Never type a paper unless the professor insists. If he/she does, find a defective typewriter with a ribbon installed during World War II.
- Upon writing, remember these rules:
 - *"alot" = 1 word
 - *"lose" means "slack" as in. "A lose woman is better than no woman at all."
 - *"Too" and "two" do not exist.
 - *"To" = the number "2", or the equivalent of "also".
 - *"its" = "it is", "it's" is the possessive. "Its stewed in it's own juice."

- Periods and commas go outside quotation marks. Logic doesn't apply; it is a rule of typography.
- Rite or wrong, be consistant.
- In "lab" courses, stand around and chat while your classmates do the dirty work. It's the best preparation for rising rapidly in your chosen profession.
- For your lab-course projects, attempt the minimum. After all, the idea is to get it over with so you will have time and energy for higher priority activities.
- Get your priorities straight:
 - A. Personal social life
 - B. Other recreational activities
 - C. Part-time job
 - D. Extra-curricular activities (if any)
 - Z. Course work
- Relax. There are few things in this world worth getting excited about, and course work is not one of them.
- Attend and/or support only those campus activities that are essentially frivolous. This rules out serious lectures, cultural events and anything that might lead to unintended self-improvement.
- Try not to have any reaction to an artistic masterpiece presented in class. If the teacher asks for reactions, stonewall. The teacher will give her view and move on to the next topic.
- Do not read the New York Times. In fact, try to avoid learning anything much about what is going on in the world. Also skip "60 Minutes" (CBS-TV) and "The MacNeil/Lehrer News Hour." Do, however, watch lots of TV. Never miss a mindless sitcom or your favorite soap. Don't be caught dead at critically acclaimed motion pictures; hold out for the good stuff: Porkys I, II, III, etc.
- Think of your four years in college as an airtight compartment. Postpone planning for your career until after graduation.

CAMP ITHACA IN SUMMARY:

Coeducational and nonsectarian, C.I. is one of the largest, private residential camps in the United States.

LOCATION:

Camp Ithaca is in the center of the Finger Lakes region. The 400 acre campus has a spectacular view of Lake Cayuga. The camp is served by its own private airline, and chauffeured limosine service is available to and from the airport.

FACILITIES:

All rooms in the two 14-story residential halls have superb views of Lake Cayuga. Atop the East building is the J.J. Whalen discoteque where fine dining, and dancing is available until 3 am.

Both pools are located close to our tennis courts and championship golf course. During the winter our snow making machines blanket the Gian Slalom runs on Mt. Cayuga. In the Bruce Jenner Facility there is a Pub, Pro-shops, games room and much, much more.

ACTIVITIES:

If you are not inclined to swim, play tennis, or cliff dive, there is always something to do at Camp Ithaca. Polo, bowling, or just sitting along the largest pool-side bars in the Northeast, which are among some of the favorite activities of past campers.

ContraAid rocks

By Woodward and Bernstein

This past week, what was perhaps one of the most moving and successful concerts since Woodstock, took place simultaneously in Washington, D.C. and Managua. ContraAid-named after its predecessors LiveAid and FarmAid- was an experience that all who attended won't likely forget for as long as they live. Which, if the concert has actually satisfied its goals, may not be long.

All the performers seemed very enthusiastic about the idea of contributing to the possibility of a relatively worthy movement. Each performer was required to give at least one-million dollars to the ContraAid cause (nobody is exactly sure what that is), so there was a very real hope of reaching the 100-million dollar goal of the concert. Just in case, though, the Reverend Jerky Falsewel led an opening prayer that all Americans would open their wallets (and not their minds) and contribute our green, capitalistic dollars in order to get rid of them commies. Amen.

After the benediction, President Ronbo Reagan took the stage for a rousing and touching rendition of the new American national anthem, "Star Spangled Missiles." The entire audience was moved to tears by Ronbo's comeback performance, with the exception of the small liberal-hippie coalition in the back row. They were heard making loud, unidentifiable wailing noises that sounded not altogether unlike baby white seals dying.

Next up was the fictional character, Rambo (First Blood) in a duet with another fictional character, Alex Keaton (Family Lies). They sang and danced to "Yankee Doodle Deadly", with the sound of machine guns keeping the beat in the background. As inspiring as the act was, many of the people in attendance had been hoping that this, the more radically leftist of the acts, would be cancelled.

One last notable event of ContraAid was a showing of the film "Reds". Whenever any of the characters in the movie said "communist" or "socialist", or (in fact) said anything at all- the members of the audience set off noisemakers and pelted the screen with rotten vegetables and spare animal parts. The crowd participation was invigorating, making everyone feel warm and accepted. Even the back row hippies were spotted putting on ties and vests over their Bob Dylan t-shirts.

After the closing candlelight vigil mourning the unfortunate birth of Karl Marx, the crowd began to slowly filter out. I stopped one glassy-eyed youth to ask him what he thought was the best part of the concert. He replied breathlessly, "It's a wonderful feeling to get together with a group of people who believe in the same things you believe in. Every person here is dedicated to the absolute abolition of potential pinkos...That's a beautiful thing."

The ContraAid concert was not quite as successful over in Managua, where all the acts were forced into hiding at the last minute. When White House press spokesman, Leary Spikes, was asked why he thought this was, he eloquently answered, "Uh, I don't know."

To donate your bucks to ContraAid, just phone 1-800-KILLALL. It's tax deductible and makes you feel safe, too. Nobody knows exactly what the money is being spent on, but as President Ronbo said, "Who gives a*%@? Now get out of my air-space, will ya?"

As promised (you wish), "Prince as Bruce Springsteen" will appear in the 800*, crowded, sweaty, smelly Bud Lite gym for Spring Concert, (how unpleasant).

Tokyo Club:

The time of your life

By Starrus McMurphus

Most people went to Florida or the Bahamas over Spring Break. A few unfortunate people stayed at home and thought about their friends in Florida or the Bahamas. However, several people, including two Ithaca College students, spent their vacation at the Tokyo Club, located approximately thirty miles from Bermuda.

"The best time of my life" and "There's so much to do" were two of the many comments made by students who attended the Club. The concept is similar in nature to Club Med, and was started by four energetic young businessmen who wanted to combine "all the pleasures of your favorite locale with activities geared for the mentality of the people who come." The Club was so successful in its initial run, that more are being planned in locations around the world.

And what has made Tokyo Club so successful? Picture this day for a glimpse of what awaits. Upon arriving from Kennedy Airport (airline service is rumored to be extending to other cities), you are greeted by your personal host driving a BMW. He or she will escort you to the Club. Once there, one is afforded any number of activities, including tennis, scuba diving, sunbathing, and complaining. That is just for starters.

Each person will be escorted to the room of their choice. Every room has a view of the beach, three telephones, a panoramic television, a bathroom with mirrored wallpaper, electronically controlled shower heads, a microwave, and push button ashtrays. In addition to these features, a personal delivery man will take orders and bring food to your door. Sound enticing?

The dining services at the Club boggle the mind. Picture a breakfast made to order. Or how about a snack of Chinese food by the ocean? The owners of Tokyo Club pride themselves on the fact that patrons can enjoy their meals wherever, whenever, and however they prefer. Food is provided nearly immediately upon request.

For those who can't decide what to do during their stay, one can partake in a complete day's program. A typical day may look like this:

12:00-1:00: Breakfast
1:00-3:00: Shopping at Benetton's
3:00-3:30: Talking about what was bought
3:30-4:00: Long distance calls to Daddy

4:00-5:00: Ogling

5:00-6:00: Complaining about the people at Tokyo Club

6:00-7:00: How to make Tokyo Club better

7:00-8:00: Complaining

8:00-9:00: Fighting with friends

9:00-1:00: Social events

1:00-2:00: Late night munchies and nightly weigh-in

So that's what the Club is about. The cost is a moderate $1200 for one week. The two students who have returned to Ithaca College say that the following items help make the vacation more enjoyable: a camera, curling iron, make-up, leggings, identification, tapes of Bruce Springsteen and Phil Collins, Bruce Springsteen and Phil Collins, Einsturzende Neubaten, and the Angry Samoans. Oh yes, don't forget your Phil Collins tapes and pictures of all your friends from home. Bring lots of cash, credit cards, and checks. This is a necessity.

Be one of the elite few to attend. The students who have gone enjoyed themselves immensely. Although they did mention that some of the other people whined too much. In the next few weeks look for signs in both the Towers dining hall and Textor with regards to the summer session at the Tokyo Club. Enjoy your stay!

Hey...I would never see that

By Nava Goodenough

Ronbo

Stars Ronald Reagan and Sylvester Stallone. Set in Central America, Reagan and Stallone travel through rain, sleet, and snow to dismantle and mutilate antagonistic forces. It's not just a boxing match anymore. Reagan is supported by not only his M-16, but also by the Administration. Congress gives Reagan carte-blanc--one billion dollars and a MasterCard. Stallone is given new-and-improved dialogue...instead of his usual garbled junk he has many lines that are longer than an average sentence, and may even total an entire paragraph.

Directed by Peter Byrne and filmed totally on location in the USSR and Central America, Ronbo is sure to be a smash hit this summer.

Back in the Ring - Rocky V

America is dying for another dose of the "Body Building Machine" - Rocky Balboa. Triggered by the success of Rocky IV, director Sly Stallone uses the formula from number IV to really drive it home in number V. He predicts this to be just as big a box office smash.

Rocky (Sly Stallone) teams up in the ring with Jason (Friday the 13th, parts I through V), his trainer, to battle Dracula, the powerful Russian vampire more wicked and intelligent than the Russian machine who Rocky pounded out of the ring in Rocky IV.

High stakes at risk, this fight is not just a matter of imperialism and conceit for the United States. Jason and Rocky are fighting for the survival of three American diplomats who were kidnapped by the KGB. The Ransom? Rocky has to beat Dracula or the diplomats die.

The Russians have the edge and play cheap using Dracula. This doesn't stop Rocky and Jason, though. With the use of some mind games and an injection of heroin, Rocky and Jason even out the fight.

Without giving away the ending, let's just say the diplomats die, and Rocky OD's. Drug use never pays.

American Rebels

Entering Manthorp College is like entering a prison. Once popular for its reputation as a party school and for its free-spirited environment, the pressure from Reverend Jerky Falsewell (the college's most famous alumnus) has changed the college completely. Drinking alcohol has been made illegal; persons of the opposite sex can't be in the dorms past 6pm; students need a pass to walk outside; and, needless to say, the abortion clinic has been closed down.

Rosanna Arquette (Desperately Seeking Susan), Judd Nelson (Breakfast Club), and Tom Cruise (Risky Business) play the rebellious students at this southern college; Walter Matthau is the school's president. The three students form a most effective and powerful union, and begin to plot against the fascist president and his administrative policies. Peter (Tom Cruise), the head of the union, uses creative and strategic plots to change Man-thorp College back to normal.

In one scene, Peter pretends he is an outsider and applies for a position as provost. He luckily gets the position and attends school both as provost and student.

In a really intense dance scene, we recognize the full potential of Peter's anger towards the oppressive system.

Rebels is a well thought out and well-planned film. Written by Charles Fuller (Mad Max), it should be a teenage crowd-pleaser.

A truly unpopular band; and they hate you, too!!!

By Bob Irallex

As you may know (but you may not), I usually hate greatest-hits albums. However, every once in a while (but sometimes once in two whiles), an anthology comes along that is just too good to hate. "Bob Irallex' Greatest Hits" is just that kind of album.

You may remember, but you may not) Bob Irallex' first hit "Hey, now, baby hold my hand, dig!" as well as the ever-popular "Theme from Starsky and Hutch," and "D-D-Dance til you die." Well, they're not on this album. The songs aren't important because none of you will buy this because either it costs too much and you won't be able to buy it and ten more copies of "Born in the U.S.A." or you just don't feel like it, which is cool.

What you may (or may not) find orgasmically interesting about this record is the fine musicianship. With a line-up like Bob Irallex has, it's tough to go wrong. The band, whose members seem to change even faster than John Mayall's Blues Breakers, at the time of printing consisted of the following: classically trained Bob Irallex on rhythm guitar, teenage heartthrob Bob Irallex on vocals, Bob Irallex on bass, the legendary lead guitar guru Bob Irallex, and of course drummer and group founder Igor Shebopwicz. Unfortunately, keyboard demigod Bob Irallex was arrested in a much publicized but equally covered-up public urination accident.

The long arm of the law seems to have followed Bob Irallex throughout their two-and-a-half decade career. Since the arrest of electric guitar player Bob Irallex, twenty-seven band members have been arrested for public urination, placing them in a close second to the Rolling Stones.

But enough about the band. No, maybe it's not enough. Let's face it, Bob Irallex has the talent of Charles Manson, the charisma of two Charles Mansons, and social conscience of Charles Manson. How can they go wrong?

So, after this sparkling review, you may go out and buy "Bob Irallex' Greatest Hits," but you may not. Who cares? Bob Irallex certainly doesn't! They've made enough money to send all of you to school for the next ten years. So go home and listen to Madonna. Nobody loves you and you're going to die.

Hagler worried over Bunyon's challenge training for Hagler during my leave of absence from I.C."

One of Bunyon's students, Tom Murkey, said that he suspected Bunyon may have begun training for Hagler as early as the 1985 school year. When asked why, Murkey replied, "Professor Bunyon would always come to class in gym-like attire so I became suspicious."

"When Bunyon began to blow off his own sports communications class, I realized it was because he was exhausted from his secret daily training sessions."

Bunyon's former employers, I.C., also showed their admiration for Bunyon by retiring the school's sports communication program after Deano left to go into his secret training for Hagler. Communications Dean Timothy Bone stated "without the expertise and knowledge of Deano Bunyon there was no sense in continuing the program without him; he's irreplaceable."

When asked why Bunyon decided to go into boxing and face such a tough opponent as Hagler, Bunyon reflected, "I decided that if I wasn't good enough to film "Wide World of Sports," why not just be on "Wide World of Sports."

Unfortunately for Bunyon, the fight will only be seen on closed circuit television so his "Wide World of Sports" dream has yet to be realized.

When Bunyon steps into the ring on June 22, he'll take a cue from Rocky Balboa and wear a robe with a logo on the back. Bunyon says, "I'll be wearing the logo of a TV station in Skraton, PA that I used to work at. I've only got fond memories of that place. I just hope no rent-a-cop get in the way of the logo so the TV cameras can't see it."

Deano generically commented on how he will fight Hagler "I'm in great shape, like a rock, and my reflexes are as sharp as ever. I think I'll knock him out."

Bunyon says he will also use a bizarre motivational technique where his corner men will show him "The Making of NFL Films", narrated by Steve Sabol, between rounds. Bunyon stated "I just love that movie."

When asked about Bunyon, Hagler replied, "He's inexperienced, but I understand he's got a lot of heart and energy so I might have to be careful." It should be an interesting fight and many fans will be interested to see if Deano can make his move from the classroom to the ring a successful one.

The fight can be seen at closed circuit outlets throughout the country including I.C.'s Doodleham Arena.

Parking key factor in decision and Freeman Baseball Field are currently located.

"We chose the Ithaca College location because of the adequate parking there. With the nice view of Cayuga Lake, fans won't notice how badly the team is playing," mentioned Lorie.

According to Ithaca College President, Jimmy Jo Waleon, "We pulled off a great deal. I get free season tickets for 20 years, and I can be on another committee."

The "deal" calls for a 30-year lease at Ithaca College. The school gets full access to all facilities for football and baseball. Athletic Director Bobby Demmin stated, "Think of the crowds we can have at our football games. Heck, our present stadium is so small that most people are forced to stay in the parking lots and sit on their cars."

Lorie has made arrangements with Ithaca College for all 8:00, 9:00, and 10:00am classes to be cancelled after all night games "That way we can sell beer at our concession stands and the students can come to the game." Look at the draw the bars have in Ithaca, there must be 10 or 11 thousand people there.

Students can buy discounted season tickets or dorm councils can purchase luxury boxes. "Ithaca College hopes to buy 10 to 12 of the 25 luxury boxes with some of the profits, uh, er, excess funds the school has," stated President Waleon.

The new stadium will be constructed by the same general contractor now building Ithaca College's new union. Construction is to start this fall, with scheduled completion date Spring 1988 (expected completion is Spring 1994).

Last week during the Cornell Hockey Championship an unknown gymnast strolled out onto the rink as the game was in progress. The gymnast proceeded to do her routine in what seemed to be a catatonic state (tripping). She received a 9.7 for her floor work and much to the surprise of the crowd she had two goals and one assist.

Down home fishin' tips from Alabama

By Clem and Jake McCoy

Hi y'all. Remember last month we learnt y'all about survival techniques in sub-zero weather?

This month, we'll guarantee you more kettles of fish than whiskers on a polecat and more deer than fireworks on the fourth of July.

First of all, get yourself a heavy-duty rowboat. The indoor-outdoor type is preferred. 'Cause, in case of in-CLEM-ent weather, (Ha, Ha, Ha), the rowboat can be easily converted into a two-person bathtub. And like our Aunt Bessie always said, "Ain't no fun, takin' a bath just one." Ain't that right, Clem?

Ain't no pole needed for this here thing. And y'all don't need no bait, neither.

What ya do need, though, is a pair of gen-u-ine, au-then-tic, government-issue surplus explosive devices. And a box of matches you can get from Ma from the general store on the corner, not a store's throw from the gas-o-line station. Like our Pa always says, "You can get anything you want at the general store."

Get the boat, the indoor-outdoor type, in the middle of your favorite fishin' hole. Don't forget to bring a jar of Uncle Elvin's special sour mash. This'll keep the hot summer sun from makin' ya see crazy things out on the lake. But don't drink too much, lake, remember that time cousin Luke and cousin Calvin took uncle Gaylord's speed boat out for a whirl, and Calvin fell in. It took Aunt Bonnie May a week to get the smell of cat fish out of Calvin's shorts. She was more riled up than a skunk cornered by four hound dogs.

Back to the yam we was spinnin' for y'all.

Row out to the middle of that personal fishin' hole, light up the ole dynamite stick, and throw that sucker like you would a melon at the annual church picnic and bizarre. Don't forget to stick your thumbs in your ears, 'cause that bang is gonna be louder than Cousin Ellie Mae out in the haystack with Wiley Stanton on a Saturday night.

With our first cast, using this here method, we reeled in damn near 200 fish. And the best thing about this here method, is that it cleans and scales your fish before it even hits the bucket. How's that for service?

And this method works in much the same way during deer season. Bury the dynamite stick with a extra-long fuse out back in the woods.

Get your lil' cousin Milt, a-hollerin' and a screamin' through the brush, to git the fear of God in them deer.

Then, when the deer's is runnin' every which way, they'll run over the carefully hidden government explosives, which in turn will blow those deer into the finest rump roast this side of the Ozark Mountains. Clem, remember when Grannie Calhoun, that's our grandma on our mother's side, caught herself that big-ole buck out in the cucumber patch?

Back to the story Jake.

So, anyway, after the bang, you don't even have to throw the sucker in the back of your pick-up, or even strap it to the family station wagon. Stick it in a baggie and carefully place it in your glove compartment. But save some for the lil' tykes, they all need somethin' to nibble on for the long ride home.

Remember, though, not to give 'em too much deer meat. Our Cousin Virgil ate too much

A cake decorating contest unfolds in Ithaca. As three disguised decorators, who are actually Iranian terrorists (but that's not important right now), decorate 3-tier cakes in which they plan to plant explosives after they have taken over Tompkins County. (Isn't this ridiculous, how stupid.)

Baker takes the cake

By Tad Brucker

Ithaca College student Hugh Baker took first place in the sixth annual Central New York CAKE Decorating Contest. The contest took place last Wednesday night in the grand ballroom of the Ice Inn on Flower Road in Cazanovia. First place was awarded to the 19-year-old Baker for his miniature three-tiered wedding cake. Kate Dekrate, internationally acclaimed cake decorator, judged the contest.

Baker's cake consisted of butter & cream and royal icing decorations. The design was made up of traditional roses and drop flowers arranged in a spiral down the sides of the tiers. "Baker's shell border was flawless, his drop flowers were all uniform, and his roses looked almost real," said Dekrate. "I gave him the award not so much for the originality or difficulty, but simply because of the time and effort involved in making it look so perfect."

The contest, sponsored by CAKE (Cooperative Association of Kake Entrepreneurs) and Wilton (makers of decorating supplies) drew thirty-four professional and amateur cake decorators from around Central New York. Two were disqualified because their cakes did not meet the minimum height requirement. According to Baker, all entries must be double layer cakes, and each double layer must be at least 4 inches in height.

Other entries used Australian lace and stringwork and figure piping. The second place entry had on its top a Mickey Mouse made of cupcakes, a marshmallow, gumdrops and icing. "Some of the cakes showed great originality and difficulty," stated Dekrate. "However, colors didn't match, stringwork fell off, and shell borders were of different sizes. Would you buy a cake that had things falling off?"

Baker learned decorating from his mother, Rose Baker, who has been decorating for 25 years. Hugh Baker has been at it for only six years. His mother won the competition in its second year. "I've learned a lot in six years," said Baker, a junior management major. "My winning design is actually very similar to the design my mother used four years ago."

Baker points out, however, that this is only the first step towards the national finals. "From this point on, I'm going to have to plan out some really new and exciting designs," Baker told us. "Next is the state competition in New York City, followed by the eastern regionals in Baltimore. And if I make it that far, it's on to the nationals in St. Louis."

Bunyon predicts TKO over Hagler

By "The Fight Pharmacist"
Freddie Pancheco

Middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler, fresh off of an exciting eleventh round stoppage of top challenger John Mugabi last month, has announced his next opponent. Hagler will take on Deano "B-plus" Bunyon on June 22 in a scheduled 15-round title bout.

Bunyon is himself an interesting story. He was once an internationally acclaimed sports communication professor at an east coast school before mysteriously disappearing at the beginning of the school's fall semester.

It would now appear that the questions of just where Deano had disappeared to have been answered. I asked Bunyon for just a few "generic" comments about what he has been up to in the past eight months.

"The rumours are true," stated Bunyon. "I've been in

SF Giants move set for May 1988

By Tony LaRusso

The San Francisco Giants Baseball Organization announced yesterday that they will move back east. "It was a tough decision but we feel that our choice of Ithaca, N.Y., will make all involved happy," Giants owner Bob Lorie stated.

A surprise move to some, but Mr. Lorie explains the move. "We wanted an area up to date with American life. We chose Ithaca because of easy access from the major highways going through town and close proximity to such major metropolitan areas as Syracuse, Binghamton, Cortland, and Owego. We feel we will be a major draw to the area and the large population base and fantastic hotel accommodations will make playing there very profitable."

Lorie's plan calls for playing at Cornell's Shunko field (their football field) for 2 seasons while a new 40,000 seat stadium is constructed over at Ithaca College. The Giant's new stadium will be located where South Hill Field
